Micro Link Hair Extensions

Micro-Link hair extensions are a relatively new technique in the world of hair extensions. They are great for almost all types of hair.

How They Work:

Micro-Links are applied to the hair very close to the scalp using tracks of hair and very small beads, virtually undetectable after placement. The initial application only takes about 2 hours.

The average person will only need three tracks (but will vary depending on the length and thickness of the natural hair). Using micro-link tools, your natural hair is fished through the tracks and the beads; the beads are then clamped down holding the track in place.

The beads are very small, only millimeters in diameter. They are also lined with silicone that "cushions" the hair for added protection.

Maintenance:

After initial application, maintenance is needed every four-five weeks. The tracks will grow out with your own hair, creating a gap between your scalp and the track. To tighten, the beads are simply re-opened, slid up the hair and clamped back down. This process usually takes no longer than one hour.

It is important to know, that if the extensions are not properly maintained, the hair can become matted at the scalp and that is when damage may occur (as it the case with any extension technique.) To avoid this, simply get them tightened every four-five weeks. If the hair does become matted because too much time goes by between tightening, the only option is to take out the extensions, remove the mats from your hair and then put the extensions back in. The charge will be cost for removal plus the cost for the initial application.

Bohyme hair is 100% human so you can wash and style your hair just like normal. Though it is important that conditioner is not applied directly at the scalp where the beads sit as this can cause slipping.

It is recommended that the extensions are tied back, either in a low pony tail, braid, or bun, while sleeping so that there is no tension or pulling on the tracks.

After the initial application, for the first day or two, the scalp may be tender due to tension from the added hair. This tension will not cause damage to the natural hair, but if it persists for more than 1 week, please contact your stylist.

The beads can usually be tightened two-three times before they break. Replacing bead is included in the Tightening Per Track Price. Due to natural shedding more hair may need to be pulled through each bead when tightened, this is also included with tightening.
